

Avoiding Business Travel Blahs

By Michael O'Day, June 22, 2007

Now it's finally possible to kick back and watch HDTV for free while on the move; no more missing your favorite show while waiting for your flight.

How can business travelers use Free HDTV to deal with the long waits caused by vacationers?

Ah, the summer season — Students are returning home from college, families are traveling to visit relatives and vacationers are flocking to sandy beaches. Sounds great ... unless you're a business traveler.

To those traveling on business, summer travelers are more than an inconvenience: grandparents wandering through airport terminals, vacationers' backpacks hogging overhead bin space and security lines stalled by families trying to remove all of their children's shoes. Getting to your meeting on time does not have to be filled with stress and long periods of down time.

"Arriving at the airport early is important for business travelers during any busy travel season." said Julie Taing, a spokesperson for Caracom. "The question is, 'what to do with the extra time once you've reached your gate?'"

Before cable and satellite existed, people relaxed in front of televisions using antennas to receive analog signals from local TV stations' broadcasting towers. Stations still send out analog signals, but most transmit HD digital signals as well. Furthermore, local TV channels broadcasting in HD offer superior picture quality to the often-compressed signals sent by cable and satellite TV companies. And the best part is that over-the-air HD is free.

The OnAir GT is a mobile HDTV tuner & DVR for your computer. Allowing people to watch and record television in High Definition anywhere a usable 'over-the-air' or cable signal exists! The GT's compact design allows it to easily fit into a laptop case, is USB-powered and comes with its own antenna. Making it the perfect travel companion.

Since the first commercial broadcast in the United States on May 28th, 1928, Americans have been in love with television. So kick back and watch HDTV for free in your dorm room, apartment, office, RV, campsite, by the pool and yes... at the airport. Armed with the OnAir GT and your laptop you can turn even the smallest space into a mobile High Definition home theater.
